SUBJECT: Filing Form W-4 and Address Change

The following excerpts from the Internal Revenue Code outline the obligation of both the employer and the employee with regard to filing form W-4 for tax withholding. To insure correct withholding each employee should review their status annually and submit a new W-4 only if necessary.

§4010
Employee
Withholding
Allowance
Certificate
(Form W-4)

An employer must have each new employee fill out a Form W-4, Employee's Withholding Allowance Certificate. On this form, the employee shows his or her tax filing status, (married or single) and the number of withholding allowances claimed. The employer uses the information provided on the form to calculate the amount of federal income tax to be withheld from the employee's wages. An employee's Form W-4 should go into effect with the first payment of wages to the employee. If the employee will not complete a Form W-4, the employer should withhold from the employee's wages as if he or she had filled out the form as a single person claiming no allowances. An employee must certify on Form W-4 that all information is correct. [Treas. Reg. §31.3402(f)(2)-1(a)].

ORIGINALS ONLY. The employer should require only an original Form W-4. It should not withhold tax based on photocopies, facsimiles, or verbal instructions from the employee.

Employee
Penalties

Employees, as well as employers, may be held civilly and criminally liable for violations of provisions of the Internal Revenue code. An employee who willfully supplies a false or fraudulent information statement (e.g., Form W-4) to his or her employer or who willfully fails to supply information that would require an increase in the amount of tax to be withheld from wages is, in addition to any other penalty, subject to a fine of up to $1,000 or imprisonment for up to one year or both [IRC Reg. §7205].

In addition to any criminal penalty, a penalty of $500 may be levied if both of the following apply:

- An employee makes statements or claim withholding allowances on the Form W-4 that reduce the amount of tax withheld
- An employee has no reasonable basis for those statements or allowances at the time the Form W-4 is prepared

Paper copies of the appropriate employee withholding certificate may be downloaded from our web site.
